

ARIZONA MINER.

VOLUME IV.

PRESCOTT, ARIZONA, SATURDAY, MARCH 9, 1867.

NUMBER 5.

PRESCOTT NEWSPAPER CORRESPONDENT.

Occasionally we find in California papers, articles written here of not only an instructive but an amusing character. The author of the following, which we copy from the San Francisco Examiner, is a racy writer, and has included in his letter many interesting statistics, as well as an unusual degree of humor which ought and will be read by all interest in our adopted and far off country with pleasure and profit.

PRESCOTT, Jan'y, 1867.
A. STRANGE DISEASE.
ED. EXAMINER—I have no doubt you will think me a dilatory correspondent; but as I can have no conception how people are treated in Arizona, it is not a matter of surprise. Since I last wrote you, I have been suffering from a disease which is, I may say, endemic in this district; almost every man has an attack more or less severe. This extraordinary complaint is not denominated by any sounding title, but vulgarly termed, Beans on the Brain. I have suffered from this strange and decidedly annoying complaint for months. Although I have some pretensions to medical skill, I have been unable to transfer the origin of the disease from my brain to my stomach, which it is needless to say, would make me a "Perfect Cure," and I would have an unlimited practice in this community. Unfortunately I have been unsuccessful, and, as a natural consequence, myself and numerous other victims are rapidly approaching a final collapse.

I promised in my last, a description of THE TOWN OF PRESCOTT. Prescott is situated on the bank of Granite Creek, in an amphitheater formed by the mountains and hills which surround it. The site is well chosen and prettily laid out. It looks huge on the map, but has somewhat of a babyish appearance in reality. There are two or three private residences that are quite respectable, some taste being displayed in their construction. There is but one brick building, erected expressly for the printing and publishing offices of the Arizona Miner, semi-official paper, that claims to support no particular political party, but professes to be open to all. As to the rest of the town, there are eight or nine stores in all; main board shanties, with the exception of the building occupied by Messrs. Bowers, which is constructed of adobe, and is by far the best and most commodious building Prescott can boast of. The principal merchants are Gray & Co., also of San Francisco and La Paz; Campbell & Buffum, a branch of the Los Angeles firm; Mr. Hardy has a large store, well stocked with hardware; and Wornum & Co. appear to do a pretty good business. Add to these one or two small traders, three or four drinking saloons, a hotel, and a restaurant, may be said to comprise the entire business of the place. Of public buildings there are none, except an old log building used as a Legislative Hall, Court House, and sundry other purposes too numerous to mention. We have no jail. That speaks well for the morals of the community; and no church—perhaps that speaks the other way, but I am not quite sure. The Court House answers the purpose very well, with a larger room attached. This very useful Court House is situated on one side of what is termed the Plaza, a large quadrangle that looks green and pleasant in the Spring and Summer. A large flag-staff graces the center, and, on great occasions, floats the Star Spangled Banner. Granite street comprises the rest of the town, and is situated below the Plaza, on the bank of Granite Creek. As usual in new towns, the houses on the lower side are built a little too near the stream, and are in some danger of being washed away during the Spring freshets.

The Governor's residence is on the opposite side of the creek, and is by far the most beautiful private dwelling in Prescott. Fort Huachuca is situated a little over a mile from here; it is a substantial picket structure, and is at present occupied by a detachment of the 14th Infantry, commanded by Captain House. I had almost omitted to mention that I consider one of the most useful institutions in Prescott—the Arizona Historical Pioneer Association. This Association was incorporated two years ago by an Act of the first Legislature of Arizona, as the "Arizona Historical Society," for the purpose of collecting and preserving the various relics and evidences of a very remote civilization, that abounded in the Territory. About a year ago the Pioneer Association was formed upon the principle that of California. The object for which this latter society was organized being nearly identical with that of the Historic Association, the two were merged under one under their combined names. They have established a library and reading room which is well supported with both home and foreign newspapers, journals, periodicals, and standard works. The shelves contain a large number of the rich and valuable minerals found in the Territory. There are also some curious relics of the past, quite sufficient to form the nucleus of what will one day be a valuable collection. Of this matter, however, as it is my intention to inquire minutely into the subject. I think I have briefly noticed all that is likely to prove interesting about Prescott and its institutions.

THE PEOPLE.

What is a town without people? There are ladies not a few, by any means, in proportion to the population. They look very much as ladies do elsewhere, except in regard to the fashions, which are somewhat primitive, and would scarcely pass muster in a Montgomery street promenade. There are also several members of the male sex here, that wear boiled shirts and shaved heads twice a week by the town (tailor). There is also another branch of the human family seen wandering about here, that can only be considered part of the population of Prescott, proper. They belong more to adjacent quartz districts, where they fit out like shadows until driven to town by the terrible effects of the disease alluded to in the foregoing of this letter. This latter is a baffling description, they are so totally different from any other I have ever met with, and are of course a few California miners; remainder are neither miners, trappers, nor backwoodsmen. Probably "border men" would be the best term to designate them by. Many of these men came here from Pike's Peak, where they acquired sufficient knowledge to be able to distinguish quartz from slate or granite; but very little, if any, practical acquaintance with mining. The result is, that hundreds of rich quartz ledges have been taken up and are still held by a class of men who have neither the knowledge, inclination, nor necessary means to work them. I need hardly add there are exceptions. Some of the men from Pike's Peak are among the most energetic and persevering pioneers of the Territory. A very large proportion, however, appear to belong to the American branch of the Macawber family, persistently waiting for something to turn up. There are several other branches of the same family here who make up what is termed the mining community. They are a queer lot, taken altogether, and appear to act as though California capitalists had no other business in life than to come here and give fabulous sums for unexplored quartz ledges. They will, however, if I am not very much mistaken, be gradually, but surely frozen out, to give place to practical, energetic men. Then, and not until then, will developments be made that will render outside capital unnecessary, or, if necessary, it will be easily obtained. It is not my intention to go into the subject of quartz at any length in this letter, but reserve it for the next. There are a great many very rich ledges that have been taken up now nearly three years, and not a good day's work done on them; yet unfortunately, this is but too easy to account for.

THE RED DEVILS, commonly called Indians, have rendered life so insecure that it has been unsafe to work or prospect, except in large parties. Even at the present time it is unsafe for a small number of men to travel any distance. There is no telling what moment they may be pounced upon and brutally murdered, perhaps within a mile or two of Prescott. The government forces are not more than sufficient to protect themselves and the government property they have in charge, and are consequently unable to afford any protection beyond what their mere presence in the Territory naturally confers. This sad state of affairs accounts in a great measure for the undeveloped state of mines, for it is not an easy thing to open a quartz ledge holding a rifle in one hand, and a tight grip of the scalp with the other. Most men carry two revolvers, a rifle and a large knife. They never part with them night or day; nor is it safe to do so. The red devils are constantly on the watch, but rarely pick an unless the advantage is on their side. There are acts of bravery and determination related here of small parties and single individuals, when attacked by superior numbers, sometimes as many as twenty to one, that almost surpass belief, and completely put to the blush the vaunted heroics of the so-called civilized warfare. This state of affairs also accounts, in a great measure, for the lethargy of a large portion of the men who own quartz ledges, and for the inactive life they lead and have led for the past three years. Long ere this they would have become practical miners. As it is they have become careless. I had almost said desperate. The common expression is that they are waiting for something to turn up. They eke out a miserable existence as they best can—miserably clothed, and with just barely sufficient food to keep body and soul together; but they bear it all cheerfully, in the firm belief that they are in possession of mines that will sooner or later make them wealthy men. I think that I have said sufficient on the gloomy side of affairs, and turn with pleasure to the bright one. There are men here, who, undeterred by Indians and poverty, are working their way surely to success. Having at the same time the difficulties to contend with and overcome, they have by untiring energy and perseverance succeeded in sinking shafts, developing mines, and directly or indirectly introducing no less than nine quartz mills into the country. I will mention a few of these men with whom I am personally acquainted.

PERSONAL.
Mr. Woolsey has now two mills nearly ready to work. Mr. Gray and others have had a mill in operation for some time past. Tyson & Coulter have had a mill in operation for some months. I will give full particulars about all the mills in my next. The Messrs. Boggs Bros., B. Groom, and a host of others, whose names I do not know, have sunk shafts and prospected ledges to a sufficient extent to justify the introduction of mills. The merchants have done their part by giving credit and otherwise sustaining those who evinced a disposition to work.

The merchants of Prescott have not a very flattering prospect before them this winter. Trade is dull and money extremely scarce. By money I mean greenbacks, for our ears are seldom delighted by the musical jingle of gold coin. Even the greenbacks in circulation (though I can scarcely speak from experience) have a greasy, unwholesome feel, and look that crisp little that greets the ear in handling bank paper on which there is no discount. I will conclude this letter by paying a compliment to a different kind of paper. The residents of Prescott and vicinity send thanks to the Weekly Examiner for a copy of the President's message in full—no mail ahead of any other source. F. P. H.
